From the Ohio Cultivator. Hints for Housekeepers.

A bright coal fire looks decidedly cheerful this evening, and reminds us that winter is at hand, and it is high time that we put ourselves in complete readines for its visit, The chests of woolens must be opened with care, so that any luckless moth that may have harbored there, may be safely deposited in the fire, and not on the carpet, to pursue its destructive work.

Shake up the the clothes and give them a good airing, and now that the chests are empty, it will be well to fold the thin dresses and other articles of summer wear that will not be wanted again and lay them in, away from all dust and whatever else will injure them. Don't put any thing away soiled, nor any thing starched, as either dirt or starch will rot them; and articles that of all kinds neath and expeditionally executed, and that will bear washing, had better first be washing. Spring if freshly ironed.

Are the children's clothes in order for winter! Don't suffer the little ones to go insufficiently clad, when the cold wenther first comes on, for they may get a cold that will last them a large part of the winter, or if it does not, may prepare the way for a sucif it does not, may prepare the way for a suc-cession of colds to follow after.
